- » A built-in, extensible data retrieval framework simplifies tasks associated with retrieving data stored in Hyland's content services platform or other back-office systems.
- » An easy-to-use web form builder helps capture data online. Plus, it provides a framework for developing application-specific, integrated components that pull data from remote systems into online forms as users complete them.
- » Accessible to WCAG 2.1 for compliance with Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act.
- » Responsive web design integrates directly into your existing portal and provides users with a rich mobile experience from the same URL across all devices.
- » A built-in widget framework allows for content from external data sources to be surfaced to users via the web portal. Widgets supply simple, configurable tools that retrieve syndicated and web-enabled data from a variety of sources, including social media channels.

- » Web forms allow non-technical users to create convenient, online forms that comply with web standards for accessibility and design, and have the power and flexibility to integrate data with back-office systems.
- » Form actions help configure forms to push form data to an external data source and into workflow, whenever a web form is completed.
Form actions can alternatively be used to automate systems integration without the need to re-key data input online. CRM, ERP, ESB and Marketing Automation are just a few examples of existing form actions.
- » Integrated components pull data from external sources into a form field while the user is completing the form.
